

June 27-29, 2008 Los Angeles Social Forum

The LA Social Forum's goal is to produce change in society by engaging community organizations to become more effective in working together for social change objectives. To accomplish this, a key element is to create and promote an atmosphere of open interface between groups that have different goals but will be able to support and reinforce each other through cooperation and communication. The LA Social Forum will accomplish promotion of peace, protection of human rights, environmental protection, and social and economic justice by directly engaging local groups and media - all at a grass roots level. LA Social Forum makes presentations to community groups, group meetings, tabling and outreach at community events, phone calling, e-mailing, and one on-one communications with members of community groups.

There will be workshops and trainings to discuss strategy and tactics for societal change actions. After the Forum there will be continued work with the same groups to cooperate and engage in transforming injustice and war, together.

The LA Social Forum has the Fiscal Sponsor: International Humanities Center www.ihcenter.org/
